ENLARGEMENT OF CITY HALL MAY BE SOUGHT

Plans are being discussed by the board of trustees of this city for the enlargement of the city hall. The building is entirely too small to accommodate the amount of business which it is necessary to transact within it and some departments of the city government which should be in the city hall are necessarily located in rented offices at a considerable expense to the city.

The Women's Club at their last meeting planned a card party to raise money for their Christmas work at the Veterans' hospital and to add to the sum needed to complete the swimming pool for the boys. The party will be held on Saturday evening, Dec. 4th.

Joseph Larkin, who passed away at his home in Stanford Park on Saturday last, was well known in Redwood City, where his boyhood was passed and where he grew to manhood. He came from a pioneer family of this city whose business activities are indelibly impressed upon the early history of Redwood City.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Result of the National Elections—G. O. P. Nearly Loses Senate Control.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ELECTION day was far from satisfactory to the Republican party. It almost if not quite lost control of the senate and its majority in the lower house will be considerably reduced. Seven Republican senators were defeated by Democrats, these were Wadsworth of New York, Butler of Massachusetts, Veller of Maryland, Harrell of Oklahoma and Cameron of Arizona. Their successful opponents were Wagner, Walsh, Tydings, Barkley, Hawes, Thomas and Capper. In the new senate there will be 48 Republicans, 47 Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite. To control its organization the Republicans will need one more vote of the Democrats two. This first pre-supposes that Brookhart of Iowa and Frazier of North Dakota, who were read out of the party, stand by in organizing the body. Smith was victorious in Illinois and Vane in Pennsylvania, despite the campaign handouts, and the senate will have to decide whether or not to exclude him. The question will not come up until the new senate meets in December, 1927, unless the Democrats, by pulling up some important appropriation bill, compel the President to convene the new congress in the spring. A new house of representatives will be 238 Republicans, 194 Democrats, Farmer-Laborites and 1 Social. The Democrats gained 11 seats. The individual results of the election in the most notable was the defeat of Senator Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee, close personal friend of the President and the only candidate for whose support Mr. Coolidge made an open appeal. Butler was a victim of the defection of wet Republicans, who deserted his dry standard and flocked to the wine and beer of the Democrats. In Illinois, where the textile mill and shoe factories turn in which there is widespread unemployment.

Senator Smith in Illinois had some trouble. Brennan cutting through the normal Republican majority. This was due to the independent candidacy of Mr. Smith. In Indiana Watson and Harrison, Republicans, embarrassed by the Klan control revelations, barely scraped through. The Democrats announced that counts would be demanded in three counties. Brookhart of Iowa returns to the senate from which he was ousted with about 70,000 majority over Claude R. Porter, the result being interpreted by the Iowa press as a reiteration of the Middle West's demand for farm relief legislation. Al Smith, invincible in his race for election as governor of New York, carried Justice Wagner into the senate on his great wave of votes. Senator Wadsworth ran well outside of the metropolitan area, despite the bolt of the Republicans. Smith found Congressman Ogden Mills easier to defeat than Theodore Roosevelt in 1924. His position as a potential Presidential nominee is greatly enhanced by the latest victory. Albert Ritchie, re-elected governor of Maryland, retains his chances for the same honor. Complete returns from Wyoming state that Nellie Tayloe Ross, the remaining woman governor in the country, was defeated by Frank C. Bumpus. Of governors elected Tuesday 14 are Republicans and 12 are Democrats.

OF THE eight states in which prohibition referenda were held, six voted wet, one voted dry and elected a senator, and one voted dry and elected a senator. The wet majorities in Illinois, New York and Wisconsin, where the Saloon league counseled drys not to participate, were overwhelming. Nevada, California and Montana also voted for modification of the prohibition laws. In Colorado and Missouri the drys were on top. Wayne B.

Japanese Movie Fans Like American Films. Popularity of the American moving picture is a problem for the Japanese producers and theater owners. Their efforts to win the public away from the foreign-made films thus far have met with but little success, although the native producers are conducting their campaign for the home-made variety. Love dramas, comedies and "westerns" are the American films most popular in Japan. But, at the same time, the Japanese public likes its own films depicting important historical events of Nippon. These productions are devoid of any humor whatever and usually consist of scene after scene of gory drama. The American films shown in Japan are generally understood by the oriental "fans" to truly represent life as it is lived in the United States. That there are no real picturesque "wild west" cowboys and "bad men" of the frontier type, as shown by the import-

Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon league, admitted the drys had had setbacks all over the country and declared these only "challenged the drys to get busier than ever."

One Washington correspondent says: "An examination of the returns all over the country will show that Republicans who ran wet in dry territory were either defeated or had hard contests. The tendency shown by this election will go far toward making more Republicans nervous if the prohibition issue is to be fought out on its merits in 1928. What the fanatical drys will do in that kind of a contest will have considerable bearing both in framing the issue and in the outcome."

IMMEDIATELY after it became known that Senator Butler was defeated the air was full of reports that he would at once resign as chairman of the Republican national committee. It is understood in Washington that he will not quit this post without the President's consent and that in any case his resignation will be postponed for some time. If he should step out now, it would be assumed that this meant Mr. Coolidge would not be a candidate for re-nomination, and on this question the President has been silent.

CONGRESSMAN MARTIN MADSEN of Chicago, the able chairman of the appropriations committee of the house, makes the welcome announcement that taxes on next year's incomes will be cut between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000. "I am certain that another reduction can be made and I will recommend it, as I did the last one," the congressman said. "There will be a surplus in the treasury at the end of this year. It will amount to about $250,000,000. Next year we will undoubtedly be able to arrange a new tax cut, to become effective in 1928 on 1927 income."

"NOTHING can happen to me until I have finished my work," declared Premier Mussolini after the sixth attempt to assassinate him had failed, and it would seem that his fatalistic attitude is justified. This time it was in Bologna, where the duke was attending the congress for the advancement of science. An eighteen-year-old youth pushed through the crowd and fired a pistol point blank at the premier, the bullet ripping through his coat. Before he could shoot again the lad was pounded to death by the infuriated mob. As always before, the attack on their leader's life enraged the Fascists tremendously and there were anti-French demonstrations accompanied by bloodshed in various places. The police asserted they had uncovered a great plot, the assassin being a mere tool, and hundreds of arrests were made. The Italian government apologized for attacks on French consulates and France accepted the explanations, but the feeling between the two peoples is becoming extremely bitter. The Italians are convinced that the anti-Fascist plots are hatched in France, and the French believe Italy is scheming to get possession of Nice and the Riviera and part of France's north African colonies.

French police, after a year of watching, descended on a nest of Catalan plotters against Spain in Perpignan and arrested 93 conspirators on the eve of their proposed uprising on the independence of Catalonia. The revolutionists had hoped their revolt would spread throughout Spain and result in the downfall of Dictator De Rivera if not of the monarchy.

PRELIMINARY hearing of the Almeida McPherson case in Los Angeles resulted in the holding for trial of the evangelist, her mother, Mrs. Kennedy, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman Slafiff, their chief accusers. They were bound over to the Superior court on augmented counts of criminal conspiracy. If convicted, they face possible penitentiary sentence of one to ten years on the first count of the indictment; that of obstructing justice; one to five years on the second count, that of preparing false evidence; and one to fourteen on the third, conspiring to suborn perjury.

Kenneth Orniston, former radio operator at Angelus Temple and the man with whom the state charges Mrs. McPherson occupied a cottage at Carmel by the Sea during the time she was supposed to have been the captive of kidnappers in Mexico, was bound over to Superior court on the assumption that he will be arrested by that time, the charges will be kept alive against him.

SHIPMENT, MICH., was the scene of a distressing mine disaster when a great section of swamp land broke into the Barnes-Hecker iron mine and filled up the underground passages. Fifty-two men were trapped by the cave-in and all of them perished. Water rushed into the mine after the mud and filled it almost completely. Rescue crews were on hand promptly but could not do nothing to save the miners.

MEXICO'S campaign against the Yaquis of Sonora is proceeding, according to plans laid by General Obregon. First a number of airplanes flew over the mountains and totally destroyed the Indians' towns with explosive and incendiary bombs, and many of the inhabitants were killed. Hundreds of others were taken prisoner and these are being scattered in other localities, the able-bodied men being enlisted in the army.

FIGHTING between the Liberals and the government forces in Nicaragua has been resumed, despite the resignation of General Chamorro, president de facto. Large quantities of arms and munitions are being received by the Liberals from Mexico and in one battle last week they carried a Mexican flag—but were badly defeated. Salvador and Costa Rica are reported to be supporting the Conservatives, while Mexico, Guatemala and perhaps Honduras are helping the rebellious faction. The entire east coast of the country is patrolled by United States naval units and Washington insists the quarrel must cease and Adolfo Diaz be chosen president.

RULING on a case from Louisiana, the Supreme court of the United States decided that both the federal government and a state may lawfully prosecute a person in their respective courts for violations of their prohibitory laws growing out of the same act. Discussing the contention of double jeopardy, the court, in an opinion by Justice Brandeis, to which no dissent was announced, held that "the eighteenth amendment contemplated that the manufacture of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes may be denounced as a criminal offense both by the federal law and by the state law; and that these laws may not only co-exist, but be given full operation each independently of the other. Only offenses against the laws of the United States are cognizable under its authority. Those against state laws are cognizable only under the authority of the state. And this is true where the same act is an offense against both a law of the United States and a law of a state."

MAJ. GEN. GEORGE BELL, JR., commander of the Thirty-third division in France and one of the outstanding generals of the World war, died in Chicago, and his funeral was the occasion of a great gathering of Illinois officers and doughboys who had served under him, loved him and admired his bravery and intelligence. Another notable taken by death was Harry Houdini, magician, extraordinary and exposé of spiritualism frauds. He passed away in Detroit, the cause of death being peritonitis resulting from a ruptured appendix.

IN HER progress through the Northwest Queen Marie of Rumania stopped at the town of Maryhill, Wash., and assisted in the formal dedication of the "Museum of Fine Arts" which Samuel Hill is erecting there. She took occasion to pay her sincere friendship for her husband, Harry Houdini, the dancer, and certainly added to her popularity by her outspoken language.

CROWN PRINCE LEOPOLD of Belgium and Princess Astrid, niece of King Gustav of Sweden, were married in Stockholm with all due ceremony and display. The royal families of Belgium, Sweden, Norway and Denmark all were there in full force and the people of Stockholm made the event a real festival.

Pretty Things that are Made at Home

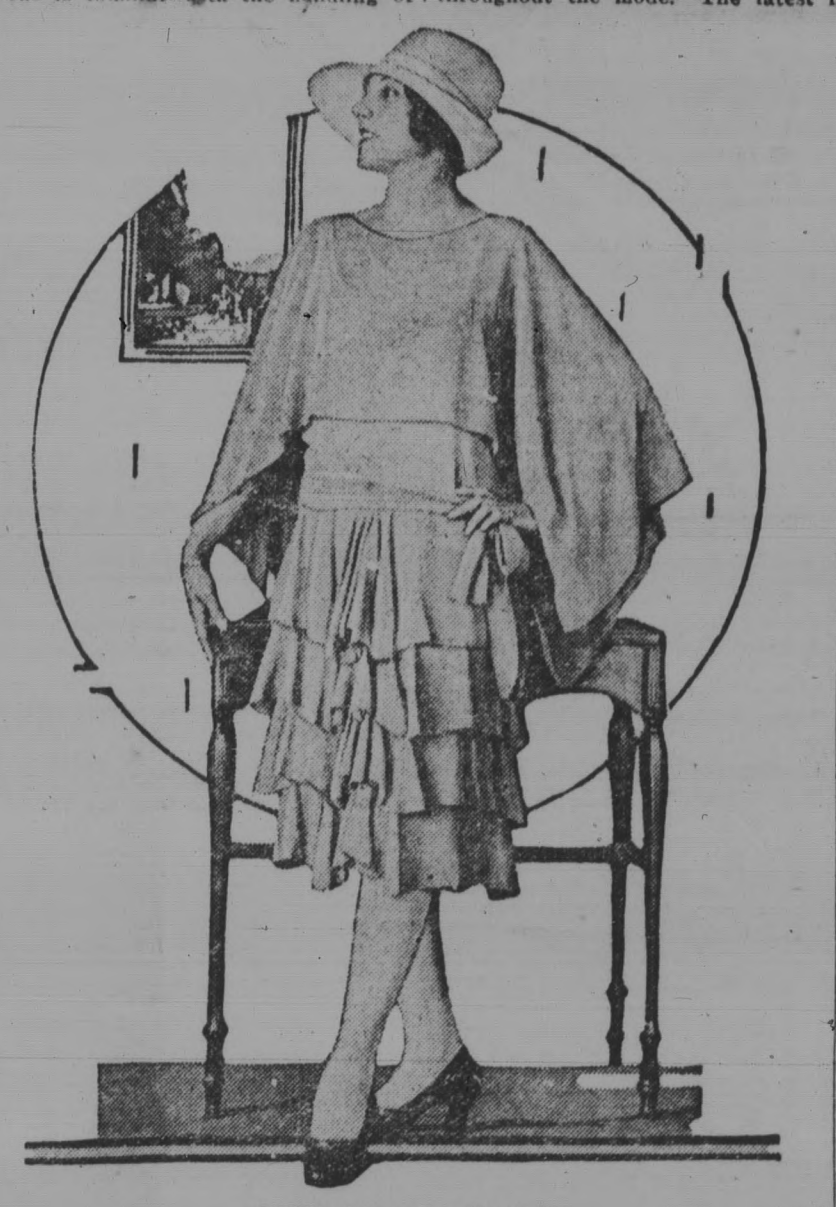

"JEWEL" work—it sounds interesting, does it not? It surely is all that and more. In fact, it is so fascinating, once begun it, you will be planning a Christmas present for most everyone you know, bejeweled by your very own handwork. There is simply no end to the pretty things one can make for the home with just sealing wax and a few colored glass jewels—and the cost is so trifling compared with the looks.

How to do it? Well, here are the directions which follow closely if you want the reward of perfect results. One can pick up such attractively shaped little wooden boxes or picture frames for a few pennies or perhaps you have been treasuring a cunning box or frame wondering "what to do with it." Here's your chance to transform it into a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." In this "jewel" work you cover your article roughly with melted sealing wax. This is done by melting one end of the stick of wax over a flame until it is very soft. Then dab it on your box or other article until the whole thing is covered roughly. Right here let there be a word of caution. Never under any circumstances attempt this work on a celluloid foundation. The box must be wood or tin, never celluloid, for it is inflammable and even if not in direct contact with the flame, it catches on fire when too near heat. Most everyone is familiar with the handling of sealing wax and it therefore may not be necessary to remind that a simple little wax taper in a candlestick with a good base to catch the melted wax drippings, or a wee alcohol wick as used in pyrography work is sufficient, no large blaze being required. Remember always, "Safety first."

After the box or other article, a tray, a frame or a jewel case perhaps, of wood or tin, but never celluloid, is covered with sealing wax, one begins on the real design. Dah more wax where you want your jewels. Insert them one at a time, by pressing each in its little pile of soft wax. Take your spatula (thin, pliable knife), heat it over the flame and carve the wax around the jewel to form a setting. One can trace or stamp a design on

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES

By JEAN NEWTON

(By the Dell Syndicate, Inc.)

Her Best Friend

"My pocketbook is my best friend," I heard a woman say the other day. "If you have money you can get anything you want. Friends may prove false, children may be heartless, but your pocketbook never goes back on you."

Poor woman, so sore that she does not see the delusion and the snare. Your pocketbook—of course, it is useful—and necessary. One should hope that more people would realize how essential is providing for the later or the rainy day.

But how many things your pocketbook is absolutely powerless to buy, and without which the things it can buy are impotent to bring you happiness!

One wants to ask the woman who cynically declares it is her best friend, who seems to hold it all-important: Can her pocketbook buy her help and cheer in sickness? It can bring her medical attention, nurses, dainty food, but can it give her something to get well for, the something or somebody that makes it worth while to fight for life?

In sorrow and bereavement, can her pocketbook buy her sympathy and consolation, can it give her comfort like the soothing of a friend?

In doubt and tribulation can her pocketbook buy her faith, that reassuring light that will brighten the darkest day?

In later years, when the world's excitements wane, will her pocketbook buy her the ties that make life worth while? Will it supply open doors to hearths that welcome her, will it bring loving hearts to give life to her own friends, no matter how drab and cheerless the day outside?

Will money buy her clinging arms and baby kisses, love, solicitude or devotion? Can money make her "beloved?"

No. There are things that money cannot buy that are as necessary to feed our heart's cravings as food to nourish our heart's blood. Money cannot buy them—neither can they be gotten for nothing. We must earn them in the heart's coin.

While the fire will not burn without fuel, while we are all happiest providing for and dependent upon ourselves, there are things that money cannot buy and which are in truth our best friends—for they bring us happiness.

Doughnuts, Liver and Bacon

The League of Mothers' Clubs published, the other day, the favorite dishes of President Coolidge, Governor Smith of New York and New York city's Mayor Walker.

The favorite food of the mayor of New York city is bread pudding. The governor of the Empire state prefers above any gastronomic delight the well-known and humble corned beef and cabbage. And the President's greatest treat? Is it filet mignon, pate de foie gras? No indeed; it is just plain doughnuts! His favorite luncheon dish we all know—liver and bacon—but beyond and above even that he likes to eat doughnuts!

What does this prove—that John O'Grady and the colonel's boss are brothers under the skin? Oh no; we knew that long ago. The point that seems to us to merit comment is that three leaders in the country's affairs, men who can afford to indulge any craving of the palate, who can command all the delights of the epicure, enjoy most the simple foods that are within the reach of a day laborer.

The mayor of a great city finds bread pudding a treat; the governor of the richest state in the Union gets his greatest joy of the table out of despised corned beef and cabbage; and with a retinue of people provided to supply his every want, with chefs trained to the finest intricacies of the culinary art, the President of the United States desires not exotic delicacies, but just plain doughnuts!

This is merely a new illustration of the well-known fact that those who can have anything they desire want very little. The tastes of the mighty are notoriously simple. Many people commiserate with themselves for lack of worldly goods and envy others with more material possessions, thinking that those possessions could bring them happiness. If all those people could only be given carte blanche for a short time in the position of one who can command the material enjoyments which loom so important to them, they would soon be satisfied and be glad to return, in other respects as in the matter of food, to their own simple fare. And they would then have acquired the perspective and the true sense of values which mean content.

Hardly Cheerful Greeting

A large number of travelers never actually see the beautiful scenery and monuments whose pictures they send home on post cards. One card showing a photograph of a vista in Pere la Chaise cemetery read: "Having a lovely time. Wish you were here!"

A Difference

The difference between a failure and a successful man is rather aptly illustrated by the fact that while the failure is doubting whether a thing can be done, the successful man is going ahead doing it.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Would Alter Temperature

The weather bureau says that if the Caribbean sea were connected with the Pacific ocean by a wide channel, deep and properly located, much of the warm water that now forms the Gulf stream would flow through this channel into the Pacific ocean. Less heat, therefore, would be carried to the north Atlantic. Ice would come farther south between Iceland and Norway, and the temperature of western Europe would be correspondingly lowered.

This trouble was so bad I could hardly breathe. I was always constipated and lost weight fast. Of course I was nervous and at night I never slept soundly. Then a lady advised me to take Tanlac. I did, with wonderful result. It relieved all stomach trouble, gave me an appetite, cleaned my system of constipation and built up my strength. I have gained 26 pounds since taking Tanlac. A Source of Danger

ON numerous occasions in the past we have commented in these columns upon the dangerous condition which exists on the Woodside road due to the fact that there are no sidewalks along this busy artery of travel, and owing to the fact that a deep ditch bounds the road, there is nowhere a person can walk except on the paved road. There have been fatal accidents on this road within the past few years because of this condition and unless the matter is remedied there will be more in the future.

In the past we have been told that as this district was outside of the city limits, the city could not arrange for any solution of the problem, and that the county had no means of meeting the difficulty. Since our last comment, however, this district has asked to, and has become a part of Redwood City. It would, therefore, seem to us that there is an opportunity for an improvement.

A large culvert paralleling the highway and bridging over the drainage ditch along the road would afford a safe place for pedestrians to walk, and would afford a measure of safety for the children who must traverse this route attending the Washington school. If a sidewalk could be arranged for, so much the better, but a culvert would at least afford a place for a safe path.

An increasing number of children attending this school and an ever growing traffic condition on the Woodside road are making this an absolute necessity. It must be done very soon, and should be done before any more of the tragedies occur such as have saddened homes of this district within the past few years.

JOES, OF A WORLD TRAVELER

By Professor Ferdinand Schraidt

Hamburg and Munich have striking features of distinction: one having the sea and international trade at its feet, the other looking up to the close high mountains. But while they are forming great attractions for visitors, they do not have quite the international reputation belonging to Berlin, the capital with a population of 4 million people, and this the statistician likes to inform us with statistics, "if put end to end measuring 1500 miles," or about four times the distance, which Berlin is located north of Munich.

Berlin has been always a great attraction for foreigners and pleasure seekers from near and far, spending their leisure days and money in this city. Particularly in the winter season, when numerous opera and play houses via is their production, and those of other capitals of Europe, countries, a large international crowd is assembled here. And this conglomeration of society, principally from eastern and south-eastern Europe, is armed with a filled pocket book of war profiteers and blessed with manners and an education, that have not even tried to keep up their financial success; these people are seeking to satisfy their demands for pleasures and entertainments, which they can find at home, and they are not content with the life of Berlin. Thousands of these marauders of modern civilization are flooding Berlin every day; there are no scenic beauties to attract them, no inspiring mountains, no soothing ocean, merely the large city with its dissipation catering to these ephemeral beings, which spend money and disappear again in the oblivion of their homeland. No one misses them except the waiter who used to accept their generous tips with a superior smile.

But this is not the Berlin with its good natured native element, of which we know through better and more intimate contact. Of course, times and conditions have changed, and the glory of imperial pomp and splendor has fallen into the dust. Yet, there are the edifices reaching into the present out of a great time of history as embodied in the spirit of the Great Elector and Frederick the Great, speaking a plain language of solemn thought into the bustle and haste of these days of equalizing democracy, namely the thought, that these buildings and ideas were essential in their time to prepare for the present day, for without restraint and loyalty to authority no community can thrive. At first this obedience was taught from without; Kings have lived, ordered and were obeyed; now this lesson is to be applied in a larger sense; these ideas of subordination are to be regenerated from within and made to obey the law and order of human consciousness, reborn and put to work for each as "master of his own soul," which aspires to higher and purer things from its own volition.

The real and true inhabitant of Berlin, who has lived through these quick changes of historical events, and has not been shrewd enough to partake with great material profit in the chaotic events of recent years, is a different person from the casual pleasure-seekers, who come and go and give a misleading reputation to his home city. There exists in this old time a spirit of good loyalty to solid mode of life and good straight thinking. He remembers with pride the inspiring days, when his beloved city together with the whole empire grew rapidly in greatness and efficiency and he marvels, how fast this success had come about, how it overran its stability until it toppled and fell into ruins. We do not see much of him in public life, for his task is work and care for home and family; but he is at last able to look ahead again, to hope for a new life of contentment and satisfaction, and he will be the backbone of that part in German thought and life, which is good and admirable.

The present period of regeneration of a whole nation as gauged by the appearance of a big city like Berlin, is not finished by any means. The pendulum, having swung away from monarchy had reached the other extreme and awakened ideas in discontented hearts, which were dangerous to state and law and social order of life; but fortunately they were soon rejected by a sound majority, and the pendulum is swinging back to moderation.

And as we leave this great city, looking down upon its magnificent historic buildings from the comfortable cabin of an aeroplane, flying over hundreds of monuments of history, we are impressed that loyalty and loyalty to your better self stamped with genuineness of hard and honest labor.

In two hours our plane carries us a distance of about two hundred miles back to Hamburg; and here is our steamer to take us again over the great "pond." We have seen a great part of Germany as it is today, struggling to free itself from the ruins of the recent past, and attempting to rebuild its existence as a great nation on new and promising foundations. We have seen that its life is still strong, and that it may hope for a good future.

One marvels how all these late revellers find time to rest for their next day's work, and one is seized with the idea, that poverty and sober modes of life are not at home in this city, where night is made into day, evidently with no time for repose. But this is unfortunately a wrong impression of the home-land of Berlin, which the studious visitor from abroad takes away with him; an idea of a life of leisure and of splendour and wealth in the light of electric globes.

Berlin has been always a great attraction for foreigners and pleasure seekers from near and far, spending their leisure days and money in this city. Particularly in the winter season, when numerous opera and play houses via is their production, and those of other capitals of Europe, countries, a large international crowd is assembled here. And this conglomeration of society, principally from eastern and south-eastern Europe, is armed with a filled pocket book of war profiteers and blessed with manners and an education, that have not even tried to keep up their financial success; these people are seeking to satisfy their demands for pleasures and entertainments, which they can find at home, and they are not content with the life of Berlin. Thousands of these marauders of modern civilization are flooding Berlin every day; there are no scenic beauties to attract them, no inspiring mountains, no soothing ocean, merely the large city with its dissipation catering to these ephemeral beings, which spend money and disappear again in the oblivion of their homeland. No one misses them except the waiter who used to accept their generous tips with a superior smile.

But this is not the Berlin with its good natured native element, of which we know through better and more intimate contact. Of course, times and conditions have changed, and the glory of imperial pomp and splendor has fallen into the dust. Yet, there are the edifices reaching into the present out of a great time of history as embodied in the spirit of the Great Elector and Frederick the Great, speaking a plain language of solemn thought into the bustle and haste of these days of equalizing democracy, namely the thought, that these buildings and ideas were essential in their time to prepare for the present day, for without restraint and loyalty to authority no community can thrive. Redwood Merchants Furnish Service With Quality Merchandise

HAVE YOU EVER STOPPED TO CONSIDER THE NUMBER OF MERCHANTS WHO HAVE BEEN DOING BUSINESS IN REDWOOD CITY FOR TEN YEARS OR MORE? HAS IT EVER OCCURRED TO YOU TO STOP AND CONSIDER THE REASON THESE BUSINESS MEN HAVE BEEN ABLE TO CONTINUE IN BUSINESS FOR THIS LONG PERIOD OF TIME, BUILD STRONG AND HEALTHY BUSINESS INSTITUTIONS, PAYING TAXES IN THE CITY, ENDORSING IMPROVEMENT MEASURES, HELPING TO BUILD REDWOOD CITY FROM A QUIET VILLAGE TO A BUSTLING AND PROSPEROUS CITY?

THERE IS A VERY DEFINITE ANSWER; HONEST MERCHANDISE AND CHEERFUL SERVICE THREE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-FIVE DAYS OUT OF THE YEAR. THE KNOWLEDGE OF THE FACT THAT ALL SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS MUST BE BASED ON CUSTOMER SATISFACTION. YEAR AFTER YEAR THESE MEN HAVE CONTINUED TO SERVE YOU FULLY; THEY HAVE MADE THEIR HOMES WITH YOU; RAISED THEIR FAMILIES HERE; EDUCATED THEIR CHILDREN IN REDWOOD CITY SCHOOLS, INVESTED THEIR MONEY AND PAID THEIR TAXES, HELPING TO MAKE REDWOOD CITY A MORE PLEASANT PLACE FOR YOU TO LIVE IN.

AND DURING ALL THIS TIME THEY ARE CONSCIENTIOUSLY, AND RIGOROUSLY CONDUCTED THEIR BUSINESS ON A 'THE CUSTOMER MUST BE SATISFIED' BASIS IN ORDER TO MERIT YOUR PATRONAGE NOT ONCE BUT ALL THE TIME. STOP AND THINK OF THESE THINGS. YOU WHO HAVE SPENT YOUR MONEY OUTSIDE OF REDWOOD CITY. DO YOURSELF A BAD TURN WHEN YOU SACRIFICE QUICK AND CONVENIENT SERVICE AND HONEST MERCHANDISE FROM YOUR LOCAL, REPUTABLE DEALER FOR CUMBERSOME TRADING WITH A DISTANT DEALER WHOSE PRINTED PROMISE MAY BE ONLY AN APPOINTMENT. YOU DO YOUR LOCAL DEALER AN INJUSTICE WHEN YOU TAKE HIS MONEY AND GIVE IT TO A FIRM WHO SPENDS IT, NOT IN REDWOOD CITY, BUT TO BUILD SCHOOLS AND ROADS IN HIS OWN CITY. THINK THESE THINGS OVER BEFORE YOU SEND YOUR MONEY TO DISTANT MARKETS, AND YOU WILL FIND ANOTHER GOOD REASON WHY YOU SHOULD TRADE AT HOME.

Death of J. F. Maloney

John Francis Maloney, the well-known farmer, passed away late last Friday night at his home close to the Woodside road, near Redwood City. He died suddenly. While he had been ill for many months prior to his death, friends did not believe he was so near the end.

Mr. Maloney was born in San Francisco but came to Menlo Park when very young, spending all of his life here and in Redwood City. He came from a pioneer family that settled in Menlo Park in the early seventies. Mr. Maloney's parents predeceased him many years. He never married. He is survived by several brothers and sisters residing here and in San Francisco.

The funeral on Monday was largely attended by friends and relatives from many parts of the state. It was the largest seen here in years. At the conclusion of the mass in the Church of the Nativity, the remains were escorted by fifty automobiles to the Holy Cross cemetery, where the body was placed alongside the remains of his parents, who had gone before and there to rest in peaceful repose until the Judgment day.

Mrs. Annie O'Brien Succumbs

The numerous friends of Mrs. Annie F. O'Brien, wife of John O'Brien, were shocked to learn of her demise at the San Mateo hospital last Saturday following a brief illness. She had been ill for some years but her illness was not considered serious by her family. Mrs. O'Brien came here forty years ago as a young and beautiful woman, where she met and married Mr. O'Brien then an employee of the Stanford stock farm. The couple have lived here in happy companionship ever since, raising a devoted family of two boys and a girl, the latter, Miss Mary O'Brien, the charming teacher of the new Middlefield road school. Frank O'Brien lives in Los Angeles and the other son, John J. O'Brien dwells in Palo Alto.

Mrs. O'Brien was a lovely woman, liked and respected by all who knew her. She lived for her family devoting all her care and time to its members. Her beautiful character is reflected in the outstanding lives of her children who are prominent in the social and business affairs of the community.

The remains of the good woman were laid away in Holy Cross cemetery Tuesday, following a requiem mass in the Church of the Nativity, which attended by a large number of relatives and friends.

Sad News For Miss Lane

Miss Hannah Lane, for some years connected with the Leroy Nickel household here, received the sad intelligence of the death of her father, William Lane, which occurred at his home in County Kerry, Ireland, on October 28. He was a retired farmer, prominent in his locality for many years. Miss Lane, who is a social favorite here, has the sympathy of the community in her bereavement.

Death of Mrs. William Loone

The numerous friends here of William Loone, whose boyhood was passed in Menlo Park, will be pained to learn of the death of his wife in Burlingame last week. She was a sweet woman, with numerous friends on the peninsula. The couple had been married only a short time.

Another Evidence of Realty Value

T. C. Rice and William Jamieson, who some years ago, bought the Collier property on the highway and occupied by the Chinese truck man, for $6000 for 102 feet fronting on the highway, were offered $10,000 for fifty feet of the holding this week and the owners have concluded to close the deal. The purchaser is a San Francisco investor, Sam Crozier is negotiating the sale. This is only another evidence of soaring prices of Menlo realty.

"Go West" At The New Menlo

This evening in the New Menlo theater Buster Keaton will appear in "Go West" tomorrow night. Gloria Swanson will feature "Good Manners" Monday and Tuesday evenings. Laura La Plante appears in the Beautiful Cheat. Wednesday and Thursday evenings, "The Volga Boatman" will be shown Friday evening, November 26. Pete Morrison in "Triple Action."

Reception Given Pastor

Rev. Bone, the recently appointed pastor of the Presbyterian church, was given a reception by the young folks of the flock. The pastor was very much pleased with the warmth and encouragement shown him in his work. Rev. Bone is an eloquent pulpit orator and a splendid work in his sacred calling.

A Good Work

Night watchman Rainey is doing good work, not only in the buildings and business places keeping the highway clear during the congestion for pedestrians. Mr. Rainey deserves a vote of thanks by the people of Menlo Park for his fine service.
